ABOUT OUR PROJECT:

The "Weather-Ready Homes: Climate Change, Energy, and Your Health" Workshop is part of an education and research project led by the Clean Air Council, Drexel University, Energy Coordinating Agency, Liberty Lutheran, the National Nurse-Led Care Consortium, and the Philadelphia Department of Public Health. The project teaches community members about the health impacts of climate change. It also provides participants with strategies to keep their homes and families safe. Workshop participants will learn about the public and low-cost resources available to them.

The two-hour workshop includes group discussion, presentations, and activities. Participants will receive a $25 gift card as a thank you at the end of the workshop.
